

December, 2009 - A Holiday Wish

A Visit from an ol' Pro

'Twas the night before Christmas, and all through Production
Not a single line was running, very little did function
The fixtures were nestled, all snug in their racks
As the plant settled down for a brief winter's nap

When out in the lot, there arose such a clatter
I sprang from my chair: now what was the matter?!
When, what to my wondering eyes should I spy
But a big repair truck, and this white-bearded guy
Toting a tool box, a savvy ol' cuss
I knew in a moment -he must be ProBusS

He ambled to the door, and knocked on it firmly
"I may look like him, sir, but I don't use the chimney!"
Then in a twinkling, he strode through the door
As he shook of the snow, I laughed with a roar:

"You've no Comet or Cupid, no Donder or Blitzen
And as far as I know, we've nothing needs fixin'
For a couple of days, everything's at a stop.
So what brings you here, to our quiet little shop?"

His eyes fairly twinkled, his face how merry!
(I wondered if he'd already been sampling the sherry?)
He set down his bundle of tools in a pile,
Extended his hand, and said with a smile

"There's nothing amiss, your maintenance is fine
Parts and repairs are all right on time
Each system is tuned, every line is top notch
In fact your place runs like a fine, Swiss watch

"I've just come to wish you the best of the season
At this time of year, we remember the reason.
Our success and prosperity comes from one source
It's good customers we treasure, like you, of course."

We spoke no more, but shook hands that day
He picked up his satchel and turned right away
And pressing his finger on a black little button
His truck lights blinked on, the engine went hummin'

He strode out the door, got in his Chevrolet
Then rolled down his window, as he slowly pulled away
And I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight
"Don't forget when you leave, to turn out the lights!"
